Fall concert series welcomes audiences back to Tuacahn

IVINS, Utah — For everyone who has been missing the sound of music reverberating off southern Utah’s majestic red rock canyons, Tuacahn is back with a fall concert lineup that is nothing short of fantastic.

Kicking off with the ultimate Beatles tribute on Sept. 25, The Fab Four transports audiences from the chaos of 2020 to a time when someone saying I Want to Hold Your Hand or the idea of everyone living in a Yellow Submarine didn’t immediately elicit questions about social distancing.

“It’s going to be a wonderful way to kick off the reopening of Tuacahn,” says Kevin Smith, Tuacahn CEO. “We can’t wait to see people enjoying themselves, while still staying safe and healthy.”

Tuacahn’s enhanced health and safety protocols include enhanced cleaning and sanitizing procedures, required facemasks for all in attendance and all employees, hand sanitizing stations throughout the facility, additional entrance and exit points to reduce gathering on the plaza and social spacing indicators throughout the common areas.

The Tuacahn fall concert series is bigger than ever, featuring 10 talented acts spread between September and November, wrapping up just in time for the annual Christmas in the Canyon event and a fabulous Christmas concert to be announced soon.
